

Document 3

From the New York State Historical Association Special Collections

"#134-D. & H. Depot, Oneonta, NY"

“People of the rich farm area to be served by such a railroad were thrilled at the idea of getting their goods to the big markets the railroad would reach. Rough and crude wagon roads were their only means at the time and were far from satisfactory for transporting the products of this lush and fertile farm country.”

—James Catella, p. 4